A Letter to Support US Congressman Dennis Kucinich

December 10, 2003
International Human Rights Day

Dear Friends of World Peace in Japan:

Politicians have power, but they are not respected, because they do not represent our ordinary people's interest and concerns. Few of them are accountable. American politicians have the greatest power, but most of them are disliked and some of them are strongly hated all over the world, because they acted against world justice and peace. Since Japan is still my second "home town" of our earth village, I know very well that, more than other peoples in the world, the Japanese people admire the American people very much, hence strongly dislike most American politicians and its foreign policy, especially these politicians currently occupying the White House and its Japan policy.

Even though the whole twentieth century history of Japan teaches us that Japan's interest is not in global wars but in world peace, the Japanese diplomats and Jieidai soldiers have to die in Iraq for another empire's unjust and unnecessary military occupation. Why? Because Japan's policies are not made in Nagadacho or Kasumigaseki, they are made in Washington DC.

To change the current Japanese reactionary politics, we have to change Washington DC, especially the White House. Every one in Japan knows this. The question is: how could we do that?

There are many ways to do so and many peace-loving Japanese people have participated to this revolutionary change of US-Japanese relations. We have met many obstacles, and one of the greatest difficulties, until today, is to find a genuine American political leader beyond the narrow interest of his/her election district or "national interest."

Now we have such a political leader in the US Congress, and he is running the 2004 US President! His name is Dennis J. Kucinich! From web site www.kucinich.us and many Japanese translations (such as <http://kucinich.fc2web.com>), we are excited to discover that our struggle for world peace is not alone. In all issues, Kucinich represents the interest of the collective destination of the only one humanity in the world. Let us all over the world support him for his struggle for a world of justice and peace.

Respectfully,

Jing Zhao, Ph. D
